Declaration on Obama Ineligibility for the U.S. Presidency

Comes now Relator ex rel. the fifty (50) State and Commonwealth Plaintiffs, in light of serious national security matters exposed by contemporaneous Complaint and other relevant matters filed herein, and respectfully declares upon Obama’s ineligibility, to-wit:

Barack Hussein Obama, and regardless of whatever his real name might actually be, is and always was totally, wholly, completely, and quite simply ineligible to have ever been qualified under the Federal Constitution as an ostensible President of the United States.

He is an unconstitutional impostor, unlawfully occupying our White House and all of the attendant powers and privileges therein, the law clearly requires his immediate ouster from office, and any person, whatsoever, in opposition to the same requirement of law is necessarily self-admitting their own willful, intentional and knowing act of high treason.

Further, this has little to do with any of the three (3) most-often debated issues, i.e., where he was born (birth certificate), who his father really is, or said father’s citizenship.

This is not about the ridiculous circus parade nonsense of his variously-alleged birth certificates and other concealed items of proof regarding his true and actual birthplace, but if it were, it would be mere child's play to point out the obvious statutory mandates of the United States Code in control of the entire matter, e.g.: [1] that all of Obama's same such records of constitutional importance are expressly not protected to any privacy, whatsoever, 44 U.S.C. § 2201; further, that [2] Obama does not even own those records, anymore, because, as 'President', they are now owned solely by the United States, 44 U.S.C. § 2202; even further, that [3] Obama's duty under law, mandated, has always been to ensure those records are made public domain, see 44 U.S.C. §§ 2203 and 2204, then 5 U.S.C. § 552; moreover, that [4] Attorney General Eric Holder is now also subject to immediate removal from office, per 28 U.S.C. §§ 528, 530B, 547 and/or 591, due to his unlawful, direct conflicts-of-interest in attempting, whatsoever, to defend Obama from any questions involving "oath", "naturalization", "loyalty", "eligibility" or "citizenship", because [5] Mr. Holder has statutory mandates to both, avoid representation for, and to prosecute Barack Obama in, any such validity issues, e.g., 8 U.S.C. §§ 1103, 1227, 1501, and etc.; and, finally, that [6] any 'mere' citizen has express standing to directly sue over these matters, under not just one but in variety of statutory authority, plus standing is also arguably framed under direct Constitutional authority, e.g., 2 U.S.C. § 437h, 5 U.S.C. §§ 702 and 706, 26 U.S.C. § 9011, 42 U.S.C. § 1973gg-9, and then Article IV, Section 2, Clause 1, with also Article IV, Section 4, Clause 1, and Amendment XIV, Section 2.

In other words, the law of the United States expressly prohibits any secrecy or privacy or concealment of the records necessary to determine Obama's constitutional eligibility.

In other words, at the very moment of Obama assuming the role of ‘President’, he automatically and mandatorily gave up all ownership and any claims to his actual birth certificate and all other such records and documentation necessary to determine his any true constitutional eligibility, because all such records are now expressly owned solely by the United States, including its government, the states, and all of our true citizens.

In other words, as the supposed ‘President’, Obama’s express legal duty under law was, and still is, to absolutely ensure that all those same records upon his eligibility are actually put into the freely available public domain, freely reviewable by any persons.

In other words, since all federal enforcement of illegal aliens, false citizenship, false loyalty, questions of eligibility, questions of naturalization, and all other like terms fall under the exclusive legal jurisdiction of the Department of Justice, under the Attorney General, that is precisely why all of the federal statutes within the laws for INS, ICE, and other immigration and related units of the U.S. Attorney General’s DOJ are mandated to investigate and prosecute someone like Barack Obama having allegations of fraudulent citizenship or any similar matters of validity, or of any alleged citizen or other person, or of even employees within the Federal Government. Restating the preceding, neither the Attorney General, nor any official or other lawyer of the DOJ, has ever had any lawful, ethical or moral purpose, whatsoever, in actually litigating defense in any of the lawsuits filed against Obama’s eligibility, precisely because it is clearly manifest treason against their own sworn oaths, in absolutely willful and direct conflict-of-interest, to go against every federal statutory mandate on the entire subject, all of them requiring prosecution, i.e., “Fast and Furious” is small fry, versus AG/DOJ fraud in all Obama eligibility cases.

In other words, there is not just one, but there are actually multiple federal statutes that expressly provide direct legal “standing” for any ‘mere’ citizen to directly challenge over the question of Obama’s eligibility, plus there are also direct Constitutional arguments that can provide legal standing for the same matter, so every single eligibility case across the country that was dismissed for “lack of standing” was a total farce and fraud against their respective plaintiffs, against America, and against all the people of this great nation, and each and every such eligibility case should also necessarily be overturned on proper review, for to rule in cahoots with concealment and brush-away, instead of ruling on the side of caution, transparency, and affirmance for the most important office in our nation, is akin to conspiring in the highest level of malfeasance, obstruction of justice, and etc.

No, this Declaration’s gravamen is not about the [birth place / birth certificate] issue, but if it was, it would be easy to point out, above, that ALL of the mandatory laws of our nation require all of Barack Obama’s “cards be put on the table” in plain view, and so, then to facilitate immediately dealing and disposing of any such highly important matter within the transparent context of an open atmosphere, in order to maintain all fidelity.

Neither is this Declaration’s gravamen about the question of who was his real father, i.e., since Barack Obama bears absolutely no physical resemblances whatsoever to the Kenyan man usually named as “Barack Obama, Sr.”, and because that storyline is chock full of discrepancies and factual errors against real history, there are various other stories that provide alternative – even surprisingly documented – timelines with true parentage allegations of the man falsely occupying our White House being actually the son of either Malcolm X or Frank Marshall Davis, both rather infamous historical figures of Socialism,

Communism and/or Marxism beliefs, which would mean, besides all of the wild social and political ramifications, that he actually was a product of two U.S. citizens, making him initially an actual natural born citizen, originally eligible to run and qualify for the Presidency, etc., but the powers-that-be just can't handle letting the public know that an actual love child of whichever of these infamous men is now sitting in our White House.

Because, if he is not actually the love child of either Malcolm X, or of Frank Marshall Davis, or of another man who was already an established U.S. citizen of some citizenship level prior to his own birth, then Barack Obama does not have two (2) U.S. citizen birth parents, and therefore he does not qualify under “natural born” status for the Presidency.

After the initial “grandfathering in” of persons living at the actual time of ratification of our U.S. Constitution, the three (3) remaining, continuing qualifications requirements for the Presidency under Article 2, Section 1, Clause 5 are all fairly simple: (a) the person must have reached the minimally wise and mature age of thirty-five (35) years; (b) the person must have lived an aggregate of at least fourteen (14) years of their life within the actual lands, people and society of America, for familiarity's sake; and (c), the person must be a “natural born” citizen. Without all three (3) criteria, the person is ineligible.

The term “natural born citizen” comes from worldwide, commonplace understanding in the Colonial Period, i.e., the Revolutionary War period of time, wherein our so-called Founding Fathers were well familiar with Vattel's “Law of Nations” as the de facto laws in standard usage for most or all international questions. The Law of Nations defines the highest citizenship level of a country to be that person born of two parents – plural – who were/are both also established citizens of the same. The Law of Nations also goes well beyond that mere simple definition of a nation's highest and purest citizenship level, into all manner of things involving international relations, including maritime aspects, liens, property rights, and other sorts of questions crossing from one nation into another, and the Law of Nations is actually still in large usage amongst international relations to this very present day, because this exhaustive work by Vattel became the foundation in the international relationship laws of many nations, i.e., Vattel's work still rules the world, and our Supreme Court merely affirmed Vattel's by-then-well-established citizenship definition, when it ruled, in Minor v. Happersett, 88 U.S. 162 (1875), that a natural born citizen was one who came from citizen parents, the key word being plural, i.e., two/both.

Eligibility for the highest offices of the Federal Government, such as the Presidency and Vice-Presidency, was expressly and strictly limited by the Founding Fathers, via the Constitution, to this highest and purest form of citizenship, natural born of two citizen parents, precisely because traits like oath, loyalty, fidelity and integrity are that critically important to the required quality of any person elected as the CEO of our entire nation.

There are three (3) levels of citizenship making up the general term, "U.S. citizen," including the aforementioned "natural born" level, which requires both citizen parents, then next is the "native born" level, which requires only the birth of the person at issue to have occurred somewhere within U.S. soil/land/jurisdiction, and finally the "naturalized" level, which is the lowest of the three tiers, the level that immigrants and others receive after pursuing the naturalization process to eventually become a "U.S. citizen" added in.

Being a "U.S. citizen" does not mean a person has any citizenship level higher than mere "naturalized" – it does not mean top "natural born" eligibility for the Presidency.

You see, even IF the occupant of our White House could prove his actual birth as having taken place in Hawaii, that would only get him to “native born” citizenship level, not to “natural born” citizenship level. The entire [birth place / birth certificate] issue is completely irrelevant, legally-speaking. What counts is whether or not Obama had two parents who were both pre-established U.S. citizens (of any citizenship level themselves, whether natural born, native born, or merely naturalized) prior to the birth of Obama.

Of course, the official story of Obama rests upon the paternal parentage being that of Barack Obama, Sr., a Kenyan who never forfeited his own citizenship to become a U.S. citizen. And, because Obama therefore does not have two U.S. citizen parents, Obama is not a “natural born” citizen of the highest, purest citizenship level, and he is not, and was never, eligible or qualified under the U.S. Constitution to run for or win the Presidency.

But again, this Declaration’s gravamen is not about determining where he was actually born, because that is legally irrelevant. And further, this Declaration’s gravamen is not about whether Obama had two U.S. citizen parents, and therefore the basic eligibility (assuming age and residence requirements) as a natural born citizen for the Presidency.

Moreover, this Declaration is also not about the apparent fact of Obama criminally using, controlling, having access to, being registered under, and/or any other unlawful aspects of involvement with at least several Social Security numbers, nor about Obama being in wrongful possession and control of the various “Presidential Records” that now belong solely to the United States and its people (see supra at 2), nor about unlawfully concealing those records when they are required by law to be put into the public domain (id.), nor about the fraud by AG Holder and his DOJ in defending instead of prosecuting.

The straightforward gravamen of this Declaration is superior and superseding to all of those other issues – Obama voluntarily forfeited his any future claim or right to run for the Presidency of the United States many years ago, and he even forfeited it away twice.

True, the first time that Obama's any U.S. citizenship was forfeited away forever was not actually of his own choosing, but that is legally irrelevant. When his mother, Stanley Ann(e) Dunham, took little "Barry" to Indonesia and enrolled him into the Indonesian school system, Indonesian law required him to become an Indonesian citizen. Hence, during at least the years when Barack Obama was ages six (6) through ten (10), when he was then known as and called "Barry Soetoro", attending the Indonesian school system, his mother, Dunham, had voluntarily forfeited his any U.S. citizenship, forever, including any and all whatever levels of former U.S. citizenship he may have had, in order for him to become an official citizen of the nation of Indonesia, so that he could attend the school.

Therefore, at approximately six (6) years of age, the young boy later known as Barack Obama forever lost his any former U.S. citizenship level that he may (or may not) have had. If he was actually the love child of Malcolm X or Frank Marshall Davis, or another pre-established U.S. citizen, then Barack Obama forever lost his any "natural born" level of citizenship, gone, poof. If he was actually the child of Kenyan citizen Barack Obama, Sr., and also actually born in Hawaii, then our current White House occupant never had the required "natural born" level to even begin with, but regardless, his former "native born" status (proven Hawaii birth place would get Obama to the second tier, or level, of citizenship, i.e., "native born"), if any he actually did have, was gone forever, forfeited, lost to all eternity. Whether at former "natural born" or former "native born" level, when his mother made him a new citizen of any foreign nation, his any U.S. citizenship was automatically cancelled and forfeited forever, pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1481, which now includes exception language in “eighteen years old [this]” and “eighteen years old [that]” as was amended in 1986 legislation, but during the time period in question, the 1960s, the language of 8 U.S.C. § 1481 automatically expatriated Barack Obama (then known as Barry Soetoro) from his any former U.S. citizenship, upon the chosen acts by his mother.

You can cry over spilled milk, but you cannot put the milk back into the glass. It is gone forever, never to be regained. When a balloon pops, that is it, all she wrote. It is done forever, never to be filled with air again. When the rain falls, you can’t put it back into the clouds. It is done, irreversible. A little leaven leavens the whole loaf. What’s done is done, they say, sayonara. At the age of six (6) years old, Barack Obama forever lost any claim to either “natural born” or “native born” citizenship status level, if any he actually did have prior. Gone – forever – was his any higher level of U.S. citizenship.

Sure, it is technically possible that, upon returning later to America, Stanley Ann(e) Dunham might have actually filled out all of the immigration naturalization paperwork for at least little Barry, if not also for herself, and as long as it was signed and submitted properly, and officially approved and filed, etc., then it is technically possible that little Barry was “naturalized” into a U.S. citizen again, but that only makes Barack Obama just a “naturalized” citizen, at best, i.e., the third/lowest level of U.S. citizenship, which obviously does not rise to the same requirement level threshold of “natural born” status.

In other words, already at the young age of just six (6) years old, his mother’s acts against the then-current law of 8 U.S.C. § 1481 forever precluded his any Presidency.

But, as if not enough already, Barack Obama did it to himself, a second time, in 1981, when as a college-aged young adult he again, and voluntarily, forever forfeited his any former U.S. citizenship level, if any he actually had, even including also that technically possible “naturalized” citizenship level that his mother might have obtained for him, by willfully choosing to disregard the U.S. State Department’s “banned list” at the time for various foreign nations, and for at least three (3) weeks entering/visiting Pakistan, which was on that no-no, off limits, banned list – automatically invoking forfeiture of his any U.S. citizenship, pursuant to clear, no-nonsense State Dept. rules in effect at the time.

It doesn’t matter that non-Muslim visitors were not welcome in Pakistan., and it also doesn’t matter that it was also the exact same time that Osama Bin Laden and his Afghan Mujahedeen fellow leaders were operating bases in Pakistan in war against the Soviets.

All that matters is that, for the second time in his life, Barack Obama had forfeited any and all U.S. citizenship levels, and was legally back to square zero, forever without even the remote possibility of ever being constitutionally eligible and qualified under the highest, top tier of U.S. citizenship, i.e., the “natural born” level, to either be lawfully nominated for candidacy for or campaign for the Presidency, let alone win and assume the Office of the President, regardless of a voter base fraudulently tainted by ACORN.

Sure, once again, it is technically possible that, after eventually returning to America later, following his 1981 automatic-expatriation visit to Pakistan, Barack Obama might have taken the time to reapply for U.S. citizenship, and assuming all the paperwork was done and approved, he could have gotten himself re-naturalized, but – same as the first time lost forever – at best that is still only as a naturalized citizen, and not natural born.

Barack Obama cannot possibly be a constitutionally-valid President. Even though the official life history, as told by the Administration and by Obama himself, differs from the various “conspiracy theories” with respect to (a) where he was actually born [i.e., Hawaii, Kenya, or on the dark side of the moon], and (b) who is really his father [i.e., Obama Sr., or Malcolm X, or Frank Marshall Davis, or anyone else] along with the “original natural born” issues, depending upon which father is the real one, NONE OF THAT MATTERS, and all of those issues are totally and completely irrelevant, legally-speaking, in the face of the fact that BOTH the official story AND the non-official stories all agree on the two important historical facts relevant here: (1) he was an Indonesian school child; and (2) he visited the banned nation of Pakistan in 1981. Both events precluded his any Presidency of the United States, because both events forever forfeited his any prior U.S. citizenship levels, leaving him – at the very best possibility – of being only a “naturalized” citizen.

It has nothing to do with his policies, his politics, his party, his actions, or anything else. He simply is not, and never was, constitutionally eligible to be the U.S. President.

This Declaration is not a petition, nor a motion, and it does not ask this Court for any specific relief. It is merely a Declaration, as yet another example in breach of contract.

Respectfully submitted,
